IT CONVICTED MITCHELL

TESTIMONY OF SENATOR'S PARTNER JUDGE TANNER

STORY OF DAY IN COURT THAT SPELLED DOWNFALL OF THE SENATOR FROM ORE- GON.

Portland (Or.), June 22.—Sensational and damaging was the testimony given against United States Senator John H. Mitchell today by Judge A. H. Tanner, his former law partner and life long friend. Under the questioning of United States Attorney Francis J. Heney at the trial of Mitchell in the Federal District Court, Judge Tanner told the story of Mitchell's conduct and of his own conviction. As Judge Tanner told the story, Senator Mitchell sat by the living embodiment of crushed, shamed, humiliated manhood.

To every word of the witness and to every word of the prosecutor, he gave the closest attention. His face was set and haggard. The blue veins on his forehead stood forth like whiplashes. His hands clasped and unclasped convulsively from time to time. For both Mitchell and Tanner the ordeal was terrible. Judge Tanner will continue his testimony tomorrow.

Judge Tanner was on the witness stand all day. At the morning session he testified as to the dealings on the part of Mitchell and Tanner with Frederick A. Kribbs, which form the basis of the charge on which Senator Mitchell is now being tried, that of accepting money illegally as a United States official.

Letters introduced.
The forenoon was occupied in establishing the identity of letters and telegrams that had passed between the firm and Kribbs, and between Mitchell and Tanner as individuals bearing on the subject. These documents tend to show that Senator Mitchell participated in the transactions referred to, and also that he as well as Tanner participated in the profits. In short, that Mitchell and Tanner as a firm pushed the Kribbs' claims to patent and that Mitchell and Tanner as individuals must have shared equally in the division of the payments made by Kribbs for the service.

Numerous letters that had passed between Mitchell and Tanner were introduced and identified by the witness. Tanner wrote to Mitchell, February 13, 1902, saying that, as he had been expecting, he had concluded another agreement with Kribbs, who had paid an additional retainer. At this time many land claims in Washington were under investigation and Tanner expressed the fear that Land Commissioner Hermann might hold up the Kribbs claims. He suggested to Mitchell that he call Hermann's attention to the injustice of such action, and added:

"We want to bring to pressure all the influence we can to prevent any such action and to get these lands passed for patent, not only because it means $1,000 more of a fee for me, but also because the entrymen, as well as Mr. Kribbs, are all Oregon people."
In subsequent correspondence Tanner alluded to these fees as the joint property of both Mitchell and himself. To this letter of Tanner's, Mitchell replied:

"I will give this matter my immediate attention and will advise you from time to time as to the action taken."
"I cannot tell you how anxious I am that these claims should go through," wrote Tanner to Mitchell on March 14, 1902, and he dwelt at length on the arguments that might be used to induce Commissioner Hermann to pass the claims to patent, concluding with the suggestion that, if he felt obliged to hold up other claims, "he might miss these claims of ours." Mitchell wrote in answer that he was doing his utmost to hasten the claims.

On May 5th last Judge Tanner wrote a letter to the Senator inclosing a duplicate of a deposit tag in the Merchants' National Bank of this city for $935.00, which was said to be Senator Mitchell's share of the proceeds of the firm's business for the month of April. The duplicate of the deposit tag in this bank, representing the Senator's share of the proceeds of the firm's business for the month of May, was mentioned in a later letter, the amount for that month being $727.53.

$1,000 From Kribbs.

United States Attorney Heney emphasized the communications regarding the payments, and introduced a letter from Mitchell to Tanner, asking that, the latter render a statement of the firm's books from the preceding November until that time. This statement was made out, showing all receipts of the firm up until June, including the payment of $1,000 made by Kribbs to the firm, as the final installment on the land cases, after the Secretary of the Interior had approved the patents. The statement of all these transactions was sent to the Senator at the time of sending the duplicate of the deposit tag for the month of May, which the Senator was presumed to understand fully and know that his dividend from the partnership business represented a share of the Kribbs payments to the firm. This was the evidence presented at the Mitchell trial this forenoon.

Damaging as it was to the defendant, who completed the seventeenth year of his life today, the evidence of the afternoon was still more damaging. Tanner's testimony.

Judge Tanner, in telling on the witness stand how he had been led to commit perjury, said:

"When Senator Mitchell returned from Washington last December he was greatly perturbed at the turn events had taken in the land frauds investigation. I had received a telegram from Senator Mitchell, sent at a point en route, urging me to meet him on his train at Kalama, and complete the trip with him to this city. I complied with his request. Frank Baker, State Republican chairman, was with the Senator, as was also Congressman Binger Hermann. As soon as Senator Mitchell was able to get a word privately with me, he inquired regarding recent developments in the land frauds cases here. He was clearly anxious and was much worried. He expressed deep concern regarding the transactions our firm had had with Kribbs, and inquired what there was on our books to show our connection with these transactions. "I gave him the information desired, and on the day following his arrival here he and I went together to our office and looked over the books carefully, page by page. Senator Mitchell was displeased, and declared also that he was surprised that I should have made the entries regarding the Kribbs transactions in the way they were made. Should the Government officials come upon those entries, he declared, it would mean ruin to him. Not only would those entries indict him, but they would convict him also, he declared.

Was Much Affected.
"I was much affected by the Senator's evident trepidation and tried to soothe him by saying that the evidence of the books probably would not come to the notice of the Government."
Senator Mitchell then demanded that the books be destroyed, and that new ones be prepared with entries regarding the Kribbs transactions so arranged that he, Senator Mitchell, would not be compromised thereby. I pondered the matter for a few moments, vainly trying to think of some more honorable way out of the dilemma, and then I told Senator Mitchell that I would consent to the destruction of the books or their falsification, even though such an act most likely would necessitate my committing perjury. I never had done such a thing in my life, as I told him, but for the sake of my partner and of our life-long friendship, and in order to do what I could to rescue him from his terrible predicament I would do it if necessary.

Changed Agreement.
"I then called Senator Mitchell's attention to that clause in our partnership agreement whereunder he was to receive all fees for work done before the Government departments. This I changed to make it appear that I and not the Senator had received those fees. I dated back the new agreement to March 1, 1901, and he and I signed it in its altered form."

Thus, haltingly yet with assertions positive and unalterable, punctuated and interrupted by frequent questions and promptings from Heney, did Tanner tell his story. As he left the witness box after the day's ordeal was over, he was weak, bent, and haggard, and he tottered as he walked.

W. A. Richards, the Commissioner of the General Land Office, who has been in Portland since Monday, returned to Washington today, having been notified that his testimony would not be needed in the Mitchell case. He will probably return to Portland later, when it is thought that he will then be a necessary witness.
